How would you want to be treated?

Senator Lindsey Graham of South Carolina uncovered the classified memos detailing opposition to the White House’s orders to use harsh methods to interrogate prisoners at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Graham’s request produced the declassification and release of those memos in July 2005.

Graham’s efforts led to the recent Senate approval of measures on the interrogations and trials of terrorism suspects. Come here him speak on the legal and moral impact of prosecuting what President Bush has called “the most dangerous combatants in a different type of war”.
